A Critical Pāli Dictionary is being elaborated by scholars from Czechoslovakia, Denmark, France, Germany, Great Britain, India, The Netherlands, Sri Lanka.

Published by the Royal Danish Academy of Sciences and Letters in concordance with the Academy of Sciences, Letters, and Literature in Mayence with the aid of Academies and other institutions in several countries and support from UNESCO on the recommendation of the International Council for Philosophy and Humanistic Studies, sponsored by the International Academic Union.

The Carlsberg Foundation and the Danish Research Council for the Humanities have secured the completion of the vowel parts.

The Dictionary is sold by the agent of the Royal Danish Academy of Sciences and Letters:

Upananda, m., Npr. 1. of a therā (PPN I 393—396), one of the "80 000" who went forth from the Sakya-kula (Sp 665,4), thus known as ~ Sakya-putta (on this specification Horner, Book of Discipline II p. XLIV foll.). In the canon mentioned only in Vin, where he is called (in conformity with rules, cf. Horner, l.c. I p. XXXVIII—XL; R. O. Franke, JPTS 1908, 18—44; CPD s. v. āyasma(t), āvuso) a) in narration and by bhikkhus: āyasma(t) ~ Sakyaputta (e.g. Vin I 154,1; II 297,34; III 211,5,13,33; 220,15; IV 94,21 etc.), voc. simply āvuso ~a, e.g. I 303,27; II 168,9-11; III 215, 18 etc., b) by laymen: ayya ~, e.g. III 215,2-19 etc., the contrast between laymen's and bhikkhus' usage being conspicuous I 214,1-5 = IV 98,33 foll. etc., III 215,27-35 etc., c) by the Buddha, simply ~ (nom., mostly voc. ~a), e.g. I 154,7; III 216,3 ≠ 218,22 etc., cf. contrast between the Buddha's usage and narration I 214,6-8 = IV 99,5-7; in later works, these distinctions are not likewise observed; he is called either simply ~, in narration (Dhp-a III 141,24; Ja II 444,23; Sās 157, 25) as well as by the Buddha (Ja II 441,18, III 333,2), or āyasmā ~o (Sv 1025,19), āvuso ~o Sakyaputto (Ja II 441,15; III 332,31), but also °tthera (Ja II 441,5; III 332,27; Vism 81,2); Dhp-a III 13,12 °Sakyaputta, see s. v.; — ~ is clever and popular, but his conduct is often objectionable and remains proverbial as such. He is well versed in dhamma and a persuasive preacher, but he takes personal advantage thereof (see Ja II 441,10 foll.; III 332,10 foll. and various other cases summarized PPN). Blamed as moghapurisa by the Buddha, Vin I 154,11 etc.; his misbehaviour gives rise to eight cases of nissaggiya (no. 6, 8—10, 18, 20, 25, 27), seven cases of pācittiya (no. 9; 42—46; 59); he is guilty of āpatti dukkaṭassa, Vin I 153,24—154,14, a case quoted in 19th cent. Burma by Paññāsāmi, Sās 157,20 foll. In cl.s his conduct is quoted as typical of the bhikkhu who advocates ascetic life, but is far from scrupulous himself, Sv 1025,19, Mp I 162,4-8, Vism 81,1-4. As such, he is the subject of dhamma-desanā Dhp-a III 139,10—142,13 (°Sakyaputta-tthera-vatthu, below), where he is shown as a cheat in this life and a jackal in a previous birth; as a former samudda-kāka in Ja II 441,4—442,26; — 2. of the senāpati of Magadha, when Vassakāra brāhmaṇa was Magadha-mahāmatta, M III 13,2 (PPN I 396); — 3. of (four) paccekabuddhas listed in the Isigili-sutta: Ānanda-Nando ~o dvādaśa, M III 70,22 (cattāro ~ā, Ps IV 129,30; PPN I 396); — 4. of a cakkavatti of 57 kappas ago, previous birth of Tinduka-dāyaka-tthera, Ap 201,3 (PPN I 396); — 5. of one in a group of three mythical fishes, Ja V 462,16 Se Ānando ~o (Timando Ee, Timindo Ce; names of the second and third fishes apparently uncertain).

LUDWIG ALSDORF

8th August 1904—25th March 1978

As announced briefly in Fascicle 10 of Volume II of A Critical Pāli Dictionary Professor Dr. LUDWIG ALSDORF died on 25 March 1978, at the age of 73.

Professor ALSDORF's early work was mainly in the field of Jaina Prakrit studies, and both his thesis (completed at Hamburg in 1928 under the supervision of WALTHER SCHUBRING) and his Habilitationsschrift (presented at Berlin in 1935 under HEINRICH LÜDERS) were concerned with Jaina Apabhraṃśa texts. His Apabhraṃśa-Studien, published in Leipzig in 1937, showed his continuing interest in this field. After a number of appointments in various German universities before, during, and after the Second World War, he was invited in 1950 to succeed his teacher SCHUBRING at Hamburg, where he remained until his retirement in 1972. He continued to teach there, as Emeritus Professor, until his death.

Although Jaina studies were his main interest in his early years, his publications show he was by no means restricted to this field. He wrote about Vedic matters, made major contributions to the study of the Aśokan inscriptions, and also worked in the field of Buddhist, and especially Pāli, studies. His first major Pāli study was 'Bemerkungen zum Vessantara-Jātaka', published in 1957 (WZKSO I pp. 1–70). In this long and masterly article he examined the problems which this important text presents, and succeeded in proposing solutions to many of them. His interest in the Pāli Jātaka collection was shown very clearly by the way in which he returned to it again and again in subsequent years. In the next two decades he published studies of the Sivi-jātaka ('Das Sivijātaka', Pratidānam, Den Haag 1968, pp. 478–83), the Vidhura-jātaka ('Das Jātaka vom weisen Vidhura', WZKS 15, 1971, pp. 23–56), the Chavaka-jātaka ('The impious Brahman and the pious Caṇḍāla', Buddhist studies in honour of I. B. Horner, Dordrecht 1974, pp. 9–13), and the Bhūridatta-jātaka ('Das Bhūridatta-Jātaka', WZKS 21, 1977, pp. 25–55).

In these studies of the Jātakas he relied heavily upon his investigations into the metre, which proved no less an invaluable help for textual criticism than it had already been for his Jaina Apabhraṃśa studies. These investigations enabled him to distinguish between the older parts of the stories and the later accretions, as well as to select correct readings from the welter frequently offered by the manuscript traditions. Hearing in 1966 that a reprint of the edition of the Thera- and Therī-gāthā by HERMANN OLDENBERG and RICHARD PISCHEL was about to be published, he offered to the Pali Text Society the first fruits of a critical study which he was making of the Āryā metre in the Pāli canon. These emendations appeared as Appendix II to the reprint, and were followed in 1967 by Die Āryā-Strophen des Pali-Kanons, in which he dealt with the Āryā verses in the other Pāli canonical texts.

These Pāli metrical studies reflected his growing involvement with Volume II of A Critical Pāli Dictionary. His realization of the need for the completion of the project, which had seemed to be defunct after the completion of Volume I in 1948, was probably accentuated by his study of the Vessantara-jātaka, although as a student of Middle Indo-Aryan he was undoubtedly convinced of its importance for all such studies. At the XXIVth International Congress of Orientalists at Munich in 1957 he joined with others in proposing a resolution urging the Royal Danish Academy to take steps to resume work on the Critical Pāli Dictionary and bring it to a speedy completion, and he attended the conference in Copenhagen in 1958 at which the decision was taken to recommence the dictionary on an international basis.

In 1959 he was elected to the Akademie der Wissenschaften und der Literatur at Mainz, which was one of the sponsoring academies of the reborn Dictionary. His annual reports to the Kommission für Indologie of that Academy from 1960 onwards show his concern not only with the progress of the Dictionary but with the provision of adequate source materials for those who were preparing articles for it. Year after year he stressed the importance, for the progress of the Dictionary, of the indexes to Pāli texts which were being compiled by Dr. HERMANN KOPP, who was the Academy's nominated collaborator on the Dictionary project.

Appointed, from the start, a member of the Supervisory Committee which supervised the rebirth of A Critical Pāli Dictionary, he contributed to the first fascicle in 1960 and again to the fifth fascicle in 1969, but his really important contribution to the Dictionary began with the latter part, when he became Editor-in-Chief. He thereafter devoted more and more time to the task of imposing uniformity upon articles written by contributors from different language and cultural backgrounds, with varying approaches to the subject, who interpreted in their own ways the guidelines which they had been given. This led to a situation where the role of the Editor-in-Chief developed in such a way that the typescripts for the eighth and ninth fascicle were prepared in their entirety for the press by LUDWIG ALSDORF. Work on the tenth fascicle, for which he was also preparing much of the typescript, was far advanced at the time of his death.

That work on the Dictionary did not come to a complete halt at that moment was due to ALSDORF's foresight. Realizing that the physical task of preparing the Dictionary for the press was taking up an increasingly large proportion of his time, and fearful that this would reduce his chances of producing all the books and articles he had in mind to write, he had asked the Administrative Committee to give thought to the problem of finding someone to help him in this task. They had in 1976 asked the present writer if he would be willing to do this, and he had agreed. A plan to begin publication of the fascicles containing the letters E and O while ALSDORF completed the earlier ones was shelved in favour of a joint effort in an attempt to speed up the rate of production. The two editors were therefore in continual correspondence during the preparation of the tenth fascicle, and at the time of ALSDORF's death the whole fascicle was in proof form, and all the changes and corrections which were thought necessary had been indicated. It proved possible, after some delay, to carry out all the Editor-in-Chief's wishes, and the tenth fascicle appeared, a little later than planned, but essentially as ALSDORF himself would have wished it.

Others who were ALSDORF's pupils have written elsewhere about the man as a teacher. It was my privilege to have associated with him as a scholar, in his capacity of Editor-in-Chief of A Critical Pāli Dictionary. Not only did he have an enviable command of English, which enabled him to define clearly and precisely the meanings and usages of Pāli words, but he also showed a rare aptitude for nosing out problems, and for suspecting from a brief quotation and reference in a contributor's article that the commonly accepted meanings of a word did not apply in the particular case. Greatly impressed by his ability to do this, I asked him soon after taking up my editorial duties whether I should check every reference. He replied that it was only necessary to check those which were probably wrong. He added, in explanation, 'It is in the nature of things that we have rather often to weigh possibilities and alternatives. And I am convinced of the truth of what my great and revered Guru LÜDERS told me more than once: what makes a philologist is above all a feeling for what is probable ("Ein Gefühl für das Wahrscheinliche")'.

By this and any other standard LUDWIG ALSDORF was a true philologist. His death is a great loss to Indology as a whole and to Pāli studies in particular. We shall not see his like again.

Cambridge, October 1980.

Ū

¹ū, m. (the letter) ū, the 6th sound of speech in the enumeration of the alphabet (Kacc-v 2, Rūp 2, Sadd 604,19, Mogg-v I 1), the long vowel corresp. to short u, both called u-vaṇṇa, "an u-sound" (Kacc 58, Kacc-v 407, Sadd 606,28; cf. Rūp 5,7-8); vid-ante ū, Kacc 618 = Sadd 859,6 (lokavidū); i-kārantā ca ūd-antā rasattaṃ yanti sāsane, Sadd 87,4*; — designated ū-kāra, q.v.; — for grammatical elements ū(-) see Sadd p. 1094; ū-paccaya, m., the suffix ū, 633,29.

²ū, ind. [ts., Lexx.], accord. to Ekakkh 19 ū pucchāyaṃ dussodhite particle expressing something like "(I) beg your pardon?"; cf. Abh-sūci p. 62.

³ū, form of prev. u(d) before h; in some cases also = upa, and in traditional grammar regarded (with u) as an alternative (viparīta) of o, the alternative form of ava (Sadd 609,27-30, 810,4-7; 1.1.2; cf. the frequent vv.ll. ūh-, ūh-, oh- in mss.); — expl. as "Magadhisim" by L. Alsdorf in Pali Miscellanies (pp. 110-117: Pali ū < sa. upa and ud), Studien zur Indologie und Iranistik, 1, 1975, with ref. to Hemacandra, Geiger § 28, and esp. to Lüders, Bharhut und die buddhistische Literatur (p. 45, bhagavato ūkraṇṭi), Beobachtungen § 110 (Exkurs über ū-had); — accord. to R. L. Turner, Early Shortening of Geminates with Compensatory Lengthening in Indo-aryan, BSOAS XXXIII, 1, 1970, pp. 171-78 (repr. Collected Papers, pp. 421-29), ud + h- (from *gh, *g'h + palatal vowel, irrespective of the intermediate stages) became ūh-, which survived in Middle and New Indo-aryan; he points out that upa and uva are normally maintained in Pali and Prakrit, and semantically ud- is quite as satisfactory; — similar views are expressed in notes written by H. Smith in 1922 (briefly stated in Saddanūti V, p. 1282: ū ... [uṣ + h]).

etarahi, ind. From a semantic point of view ~ contrasts with idāni, adhunā and aṇṇa in the sense that the time reference of ~ is less restricted in scope, referring, from the point of view of the speaker, both to the near past and the future as well as to longer periods of time [for the corresponding usage of sa. etarhi v. Ai.Gr. III § 255b foll.]. In the limited number of instances where ~ is used in narrative prose in combination with idāni or aṇṇa, the latter would seem to have a restrictive force: "just now, today": From a morphological point of view ~ and idāni contrast with aṇṇa and adhunā in not forming compounds (v. s.vv. aṇṇa and adhunā); — eta rahimhi. sabbass' eva ima-saddassa etādeso hoti rahimhi paccaye pare: etarahi, Kacc 236 and Kacc-v ≠ Sadd 676,25-26; — imass' eto kāle rahi ca imasmim kāle: etarahi, Mogg-v ad IV 119; — Exeg.: "appam vassasatam āyu idān' ~ vijjati" (= Bv XXVI 21) ti pāṇiyam idāni-etarahi-saddānam samānatthānam pi vevacanabhāvena samāgamo dissati, Sadd 683,18-21; — sandissanti nu kho ... ~ brāhmaṇā porāṇānam brāhmaṇānam brāhmaṇadhamme ti, Sn 50,20 etto, ind: (cf. *prakr. and BHS etto and v. BHS s.vv.]; Asokan inscr. eta, heta, (ya)tha; in some cases where Ee.s print h’ ~ it is probably justified to read hettha [= emphatic h-; cf. Asokan inscr. heta]); — 1. demonstrative adv. of place with a locative sense (used anaphorically, and therefore often hardly distinguishable from the analogous pronominal usage of ~; v. 2. infra); a. (i). here, in this place (relatively rare); (ii). (here, i.e.) in this context, in this case, in this respect; (common; cf. the similar usage of sa. atra); b. there, in that place (common; contrasted with idha, q.v.; correl. to kattha or yattha); — 2.a. used substantively as a pronominal substitute for the demonstrative pronoun eta-, when expressing the goal towards which or the point or source from which a verbal action is directed; in both cases ~ is used as an anaphora (cf. the usage of sa. atra, atas and v. Pāṇ. II 4. 32-33); b. used adjectively (= loc. of eta-; rare); — 3. used as a conj., in which case ~ is commonly found in sentence initial position; a. of consequence, inference (often with enclitic dāni, v. Pischel § 144 and cf. sa. tata idāniṃ); then, therefore, for that reason, on that account, in that case, in those circumstances; as correl. to sace (“if ... then ...”) and kattha or yattha; b. of sequence: hereafter, henceforth, now then (cf. sa. atas; rare); — Rem.: a. The derivation of ~ remains uncertain. It is not possible to derive ~ from the pronominal stem i- + the locative suffix -tra: *itra > ettha, as suggested by Geiger §§ 9-10, since this leaves the derivation of the suffix -ttha unexplained. It is more likely that ~ is to be derived either from the pronominal stem e- (by analogy with the pronominal stem

i-) with the ablative suffix -ttha (with e- > ě before the geminate consonant) < *-stāt (cf. puratthaṃ < sa. purastāt), as suggested by Schwarzschild in JAs 244, (1956), pp. 269 foll., or from the stem et- with the suffix -ttha (cf. etto, and v. Pischel’s suggestion [§ 107] of a derivation from *ittha [= sa. itthā]); — b. Whereas it is possible to explain the usage of ~ as a substitute for the abl. forms of eta- on the basis of the first of these derivations, the other usages (except the loc.) are more difficult to explain. It would seem that ~ combines to a large extent the syntactical and semantical properties of sa. atra (loc.) and atas (abl.); — gramm. lit.: sabbass’ etass’ akāro vā. sabbassa etasaddassa akāro hoti vā to-tha icc’ etesu: ato, attha; etto, ~, Kacc 231 and Kacc-v ad loc. ≠ Sadd 676,17-18; e to-thesu vā. sabbass’ etasaddassa ekāro hoti vā to-tha icc’ etesu: etto, ato; ~, attha, Kacc 233 and Kacc-v ad loc.; sabbādito sattamyā tra-tthā, Mogg IV 111; katth’-ettha-kutrātra-kvêdhā ... etasmim: ~, atra, 112 and Mogg-v ad loc.; cf. ena, mfn. [ts.], a third singular pronominal stem, referring to someone or something already mentioned; Childers (s.v) and Geiger (§ 107.2) state that it is found in the acc. and instr., but give no refs for the latter; it is sometimes used (and regarded by ct.s and gr.s) as a particle (cf. sa. enā and prakr. naṃ); see the usage with taṃ below; — padapūraṇaṃ bahuvidhaṃ: ... -aṃ, Sadd 890,31; Pay II 42; — acc. sg. m.: Tathāgato tiṭṭhantaṃ -aṃ jānāti vimuttaṃ tapparāyanaṃ, Sn 1114 (tiṭṭhantaṃ etaṃ puggalaṃ jānāti, Pj II 601,13); socantaṃ -aṃ dukkhitaṃ (metr.) viditvā, Ja III 204,28° (evaṃ purisaṃ socantaṃ ... viditvā, 205,13°); tāpopasantikakaraṇaṃ saraṇidum -aṃ santatthiko ... na bhajeyya ko vā, Upāsak 152,20°; — acc. sg. n.: kayirā c° -aṃ

Sadd 891,16 (as ex. of padapūraṇa); — it is commonly found in combination with taṃ, where the correct interpretation is not always clear; — (a) sometimes it can be taken as a pleonastic pronoun, cf. so 'haṃ, taṃ maṃ (Sn 425), etc., but with verbs of saying, etc., it may represent the second of two accusatives: taṃ -aṃ evaṃ vadeyyuṃ ("he spoke to [that same] him as follows" or "he spoke this to him, as follows"), D I 193,6 foll. = 194,19 = 214,28 = 242,4 = 243,5 foll.; taṃ -aṃ tvaṃ evaṃ vadeyyāsi, M I 392,27 = III 5,7; taṃ -aṃ rājā evaṃ vadeyya, S II 100,12 foll. = Mil 110,18; taṃ -aṃ abravī Subhā, Thī 366; taṃ -aṃ bhikkhū evaṃ ahaṃsu, Pp 33,33; — (b) in many exx. taṃ can be taken as an adv. "then", with enaṃ in a pronominal sense: taṃ -a (metr.) passāmi pareṇa nāriṃ ("then I see that woman"), Ja III 395,5°; taṃ -aṃ passeyya koci eva puriso ("then some man or other might see him"), Mil 110,21; — (c) some exx. seem to show a usage of taṃ as an adv. with -aṃ as a particle (cf. prakr. naṃ), since there is nothing to which -aṃ might refer: taṃ -aṃ aññatāro bhikkhu yena so bhikkhu ten° upasaṅkami, Vin I 127,32 (v. BHSD, s.v. tam-enaṃ, where the interpretation as pronouns is preferred); taṃ -aṃ manussā disvā evaṃ ahaṃsu, D III 94,7,19 (= te ete manussā passitvā, Sv 870,27; the ct. is presumably taking taṃ as a pl., in order to relate it to persons already mentioned); taṃ -aṃ puriso evaṃ vadeyya, Paṭis I 144,23 (tam enā [BeEe so] ti ettha, °-saddo nipātamatthaṃ, tan ti [Ee so; Be tam etan ti] vā attho, Paṭis-a 450,31) = 145,6 = 145,21; taṃ -aṃ puriso mūlaṃ chindeyya, Paṭis II 218,10 (tam -an ti taṃ rukkhāṃ, -ā [Ee so; Be -an] ti nipātamatthaṃ; taṃ etan ti vā attho, Paṭis-a 688,26); — this usage is especially common in narrative prose, where there is sometimes a previous object in the singular to which either taṃ or -aṃ might refer, but sometimes there is no such object (such an alternation perhaps provides a clue as to the way in which the usage arose): M III 132,28 foll.; 179,13 foll. ≠ Nidd I 402,17 foll. ≠ Nidd II 168,19 foll.; — (d) sometimes taṃ -aṃ occurs in passages syntactically parallel to other passages with forms such as yato naṃ ... , tato naṃ ... , atha (naṃ) ... , which again gives a hint as to the way in which the usage might have developed: taṃ -aṃ samannesamāno evaṃ jānāti, M II 176,6,23 (cf. yato naṃ samannesamāno ... tato naṃ uttariṃ samannesati, 172,32-173,1); seyyathā pi udakamaṇiko pūro udakassa ... taṃ -aṃ balavā puriso yato yato āvajjeyya, III 96,21 (cf. seyyathā pi ... udakamaṇiko pūro udakassa ... atha puriso āgaccheyya, 96,7-9); taṃ -aṃ dānaninnaṃ cittaṃ bhavantare pi na vijahati, Ja IV 62,24 ("therefore his mind does not leave him"; cf. atha naṃ ahaṃ ... dānaphalāṃ nāpesiṃ, 62,23).

okkhāyika, (m)/(n). [derivation and meaning uncertain; v. infra], waned, gone down, sunken (cf. so; scdry deriv. from ava/apa + √kṣi [cf. sa. kṣāyika] ?) or, perhaps, beyond the reach of vision (scdry deriv. from ava/apa + √khyā [cf. sa. -khyāyaka] ?); seyyathā pi nāma gambhīre udapāne udakatārakā gambhīragatā -ā dissanti evam eva ssu me akkhikūpesu akkhitarakā gambhīragatā -ā dissanti, M I 80,20 (-ā ti heṭṭhā anupavittā, Ps II 50,13) = 245,35; — Rem.: the meaning and derivation of ~ found only in this context remain uncertain. The ct. may be correct, but the equivalents for ~ in the parallel narratives in Mvu II 127,6 (kṛcchradarśanāye saṁprakāśenti) and Lal 254,17 (kṛcchreṇa saṁprakāśyante) may represent correct re-interpretations of an earlier tradition. If so, they would seem to support the alternative meaning suggested here.

okkhāsata, n. [the reading of BeCe for ukkhāsataṁ at S II 264,20-22 (v.l. in Ee ukkāsaṁ)], perhaps (a) a hundred pots (cf. prakr. ukkhā; sa. ukhā), or (b) a hundred torches (cf. ukkā/okkā; sa. ulkā); yo ... pubbaṇhasamayam -am dānam dadeyya, S II 264,20 = 264,21-22 (-an [BeCe so; Ee ukkhā; v.ll. okkhā; okkā-] ti mahāmukha-ukkhālīnam sataṁ ... ukkā-sataṁ [Ee two words] ti pi pāṭho. tassa daṇḍadīpikasatan ti attho, Spk II 224,5,7); — Rem.: as the ct. and v.ll. show, there was no certainty about the correct reading and interpretation of ~. The okkh-/ukkh- alternation can be interpreted as showing ḍ- as a variation of u- before a doubled consonant. The problem is ukkā/okkā vs. ukkhā/okkhā, but the context does not make a conclusion possible. The supposed parallel ukkādanam at Ap 404,5 is probably an old error for ukkādhāra (cf. Ap 415,8).

The parallel verse to Ja at Utt XII 6 reads oma-celae (= nom.; explained as nikṣṭacivara), and XII 7 reads omacelayā (= voc.). Both these readings are unmetrical. They support the explanation in Ja which refers to clothing, and possibly represent a gloss which has replaced the original reading. A prakr. origin would explain the indecision about the intervocalic consonant.

√op; opa niṭṭhubhane ... : opati, Sadd 404,11 (= √563); opa ... thapane: opeti opayati, Sadd 553,26 (= √1544); — Rem.: ~ is postulated by Aggavaṃsa on the basis of the canon and ct.s; it is extracted from the verbal forms ~eti, ~enti, ~i, ~itvā, ~iya, ~ehi (qq.v. s.vv. opati and opeti). These forms are perhaps to be derived from ā + √vap through ā + up (zero grade of √vap) > op- (cf. sa. abs. opya = ā + upya), which came to assume the function of a verbal root. The two meanings: (i) to spit and (ii) to place, to put, which Aggavaṃsa ascribes to ~ are basically correct; cf. sa. āvapati and v. s.vv. opati, opeti; os- is sometimes wrongly substituted for op- because of the confusion of the letters p and s (v. Norman, EV I 49).

ovāda, m. [vb. noun from ovadati; Buddhist sa. and BHS avavāda (q.v. in BHS, s.v.) is a Sanskritizing backformation from m.i. ovāda; v. s.v. ovadati], lecture, admonition; order, injunction; more specifically ~ denotes the ritual lecture, on the uposatha day (cf. the expression "to go to or attend the lecture" [-am/-āya gam- or āgam-]), given to the bhikkhunis about their eight garudhammā (q.v.); sometimes ~ appears to be used synonymously with anusāsani, anusīthi or sāsana (qq.v.; cf. infra); elsewhere ~ appears to be used in contrast to uddesa, paripucchā (qq.v.) and anusāsani (v. infra); — Rem.: the alternative interpretations suggested by the cr.s (q.v. in exeg. infra), contrasting ~ with anusāsani, do not seem to be supported by canonical usage; the claim that ~ refers to direct communication (sammukhā-vacanāṃ), whereas anusāsani refers to indirect communication (parammukhā-vacanāṃ), is probably influenced by the canonical usage of sammukhā in the context of ~; cf.
